2/14 Alamayah, Indonesia

It's only a 50-minute flight from Bali, but Sumba feels like a different universe. Home to one of the last flourishing prehistoric tribes on earth, Sumba's rich culture and raw natural beauty make it a true gem; it also hosts only a handful of responsible hotels committed to preserving this special community. The newest name is Alamayah, a five-star boutique retreat located in the beachside village of Kerewe.

Getting here is an adventure in itself—guests take a two-hour drive through mountains, waterfalls and mahogany forests that introduce the island's untouched scenery. With only six private suites, the intimate hotel is focused on helping guests reconnect with themselves, offering activities such as yoga, sound healing, jungle treks and, of course, surfing. The all-inclusive stay also features a healer's body analysis, three plant-based meals a day, as well as medicinal mixology.

3/14 Ariara, The Philippines

Ariara is all about low-impact luxury—promising guests a glimpse of the Philippines as it was before tourism descended on the islands. Boasting 125-acres of pristine beach and forest, guests can choose to stay in tropical beach cottages or in elevated jungle villas. With the exception of local fishermen bringing in the catch of the day, the surrounding sea is yours and yours alone to explore by jet ski, snorkel, scuba, or on Ariara's restored 100-foot trimaran.

The fully-staffed private island can be exclusively yours, catering to up to 18 guests, with every experience tailored to meet your needs from. No request is too great – from on-site yoga to making sure that your favourite wine or champagne is on-site before you arrive, the staff will have you covered.

4/14 Bawah Reserve, Indonesia

Just a three-hour journey from Singapore is Bawah Reserve—one of Indonesia's most exclusive, off-the-grid resorts. Set amidst the Anambas archipelago, Bawah is a sanctuary for mindful travellers. It is the first island in Indonesia to be powered by a renewable micro-grid, boasting 35 safari tent-like villas hand-built from sustainable materials such as bamboo, recycled teak and copper. The property hosts up to 70 guests at any time, though we imagine further restrictions will be implemented once it is re-opened. Bawah Reserve will also be unveiling Elang Private Island this year, an adults-only private island experience featuring six eco-conscious cliffside lodges created by Singaporean design Sim Boon Yang.

With the surrounding beauty of flourishing greenery and tranquil blue waters, entertainment here comes in the form of the great outdoors—there is no TV or radio in the suite, and Wifi connectivity is limited. Instead, the resort offers the sandy beach at your doorstep with a myriad of water sports options, a well-appointed open-air spa, and other activities like yoga and trekking.

7/14 Cempedak Island

A pristine beach paradise located just in our own backyard—Cempedak Island, off the coast of the Riau Islands in Indonesia, is just less than three hours away. Built with ‘barefoot luxury’ in mind, the adult-only resort is the perfect place for an urban detox. There is no air-conditioner, TV, fridge, or single-use amenities here, but you can count on the clever and beautiful design of the eco-conscious resort and its 20 villas.

Built from natural materials like sustainable bamboo and alang alang cogon grass, fully immerse in the gentle sea breeze and the comforts of organic textiles in your abode. And in the day, explore the natural wonders that the isle has to offer with its thriving flora and fauna. Every day is a feast at the resort’s only restaurant, with ingredients freshly picked from an on-site garden or its seven-hectare farm in Bintan.

14/14 The Legian Sire, Indonesia

Affectionately known as Bali's sister island due to its proximity—it's a mere 25-minute flight or a ferry ride away—Lombok is definitely coming into its own. All the more so with the upcoming opening of The Legian Sire in December. Set on the 3.8-kilometre Sire beach, the all-suite resort features 46 luxurious rooms and a penthouse, with the smallest suite at 100 square metres.

Designed by Studio Affandy & Yeo—whose principals are prodigies of Indonesian design legend Jaya Ibrahim—the interiors celebrate local culture and craftsmanship. It also seamlessly blends with the architecture of award-winning ESA International, headed by Putu Edy Semara. The firm crafted a stunning two-tiered swimming pool, one tier measuring 70-metres and the other 50-metres, and a clever masterplan that allows every suite to enjoy a large private terrace with ocean views.
